Serie A—Monografías 192 (Woodbridge: Tamesis, 2003), 27–41. [A reconsideration of issues discussed in No. 33, above.]
- 61 'The Alpha/Beta Version of the Second Half of Tristana', Anales Galdosianos, XXXVIII–XXXIX (2003–2004), 127–37. [A discussion of the differences between the earlier and later versions of this novel, showing how by making structural changes and removing the more extravagant elements of the original plot, Galdós makes the story-line and the dénouement of Tristana more in keeping with the novelist's practice of realism.]
- 62 'Preface' to Antonio García Gutiérrez, 'El trovador', trans., with an intro., by Robert G. Trimble, Hispanic Literature 94 (Lewiston/Queenston/Lampeter: The Edwin Mellen Press, 2004). [Explains how in this famously Romantic drama, the basic elements of war, rivalry, hatred, love, honour, shame and fear, are coherently bound together to form a dramatic plot that exploits them to the full and which is made readily intelligible to a live audience; Trimble's English translation, which gives a true account of Gutiérrez's The Troubadour, is shown to perform a valuable service to international culture.]
- 63 'Transformación y realismo en La razón de la sinrazón', in Actas del Séptimo Congreso Internacional de Estudios Galdosianos (Las Palmas de Gran Canaria: Excmo Cabildo Insular de Gran Canaria, 2004), 591–600. [Interprets Galdós' last novel, sometimes described as a 'fábula teatral', as a strangely incoherent mixture of the fantastic and the realistic which is best understood as a work discarded while still in draft; as a result, it failed to benefit from the great realist novelist's usual practice of meticulously revising his works before finalizing them.]
- 64 '“Unas pocas palabras verdaderas”: The Naming and Framing of Nature in Machado's Campos de Castilla', in Studies in Modern Hispanic Literatures in Honour of Donald L. Shaw, ed., with an intro., by Robin W. Fiddian & C. Alex Longhurst, BSS, 82:3–4 (2005), 509–27. [An analysis of the repetitive, 'generic' language that acts as a frame within which the poet evokes and portrays the nature and landscape of Castile and/or Andalusia and imbues them with his memories, insights and emotions.]
- 65 'Flin-flan: la estructura de Fortunata y Jacinta', Revista de Erudición y Crítica, 1 (2006), 8–31. [Written to inaugurate the first number of this new learned journal launched through the Editorial Castalia.]
- 66 'Un “cursillo” machadiano de poesía en Segovia: “En tren. Flor de verbasco” de Nuevas canciones de 1924', in Hoy es siempre todavía. Curso

- Internacional sobre Antonio Machado. Córdoba, 7–11 de noviembre de 2005*, coord. Jordi Doménech, Iluminaciones 20 (Sevilla: Renacimiento/Córdoba: Ayuntamiento de Córdoba, 2006), 380–401. [Discusses inter alia Machado's previously unsuspected interest in and disapproval of 'medical exile'—i.e., the early twentieth-century practice of isolating sufferers from TB in remote sanatoria, away from human society and from the many benefits (both physical and psychological) that patients could have derived from the natural and rural environment beyond the walls that enclosed them.]
- 67 'Committed [?] Writing in the Spanish Civil War', in Teaching Representations of the Spanish Civil War, ed. Noël Valis, Modern Language Association of America Options for Teaching (New York: Modern Language Association of America, 2007), 196–205. [This essay, contributed to a handbook compiled to assist with teaching advanced or postgraduate students about the Spanish Civil War in all its major manifestations, discusses the cultural and intellectual responses to the Civil War drawn from A. Machado and some of his contemporaries.]
- 68 'Antonio Machado's Manuscripts', BSS, LXXXV:4 (2008), 507–18 [review-article on Colección Unicaja manuscritos de los hermanos Machado, ed. Rafael Alarcón Sierra, Pablo del Barco & Antonio Rodríguez Almodóvar; see below, No. 126].

P., 2011), <<https://doi.org/10.1093/ref:odnb/75075>> (accessed 2 November 2018). [Includes comments on Starkie's travel writing and adventures in Spain and his activities while living there during World War II, acting discreetly as Churchill's man not Franco's.]
- 72 'Antonio Machado y el exilio de la vida', Turia, 104 (2012), 136–47. [A study of the theme and influence of exile in the life and work of Machado.]
- 73 'Introduction' to Juan Valera, Pepita Jiménez: A Novel, trans. Robert M. Fedorcheck, Aris & Phillips Hispanic Classics (Oxford: Oxbow Books, 2012), ix–xxviii. [Discusses inter alia Valera's 'mentalidad empresarial' ('managerial mind'), which developed from his experiences as a diplomat, typically working behind the scenes to manipulate relationships and reach agreements.]
- 74 'Nature and Culture in Pepita Jiménez', Anales Galdosianos, XLVII (2012), 55–69. [Discusses how Valera constructs his story of love and marriage in the agricultural and horticultural environment of provincial

Andalusia, to illustrate how by blending a cultured urban life with a natural rural existence, a way of living and relating to others can be produced that is of benefit to body, mind and spirit.]

- 75 ‘“Laid in Earth”: Some Physical Touches in Valera’s Pepita Jiménez’, in Theatre, Culture and History in Spain: Studies and Researches in Honour of Ann L. Mackenzie, ed. James Whiston & Ceri Byrne, with guest editor Jeremy Robbins; intro. by Don W. Cruickshank & Victor Dixon, with C. Alex Longhurst, BSS, XCII:8–10 (2015), 427–40. [The article shows how from the novel’s beginning Valera prepares us for its dénouement which brings the protagonists to commit themselves to a life dependent on the daily social round and the physical and earthly environment they inhabit.]
- 76 ‘Patience and Pragmatism: Galdós’s Rewriting of the Last Four Chapters of Halma’, Anales Galdosianos, LII (2017), 79–89. [A comparison of the first draft of the final chapters of Halma with the significantly different and superior revised version which gave the definitive ending to Galdós’ novel.]
